I have waited a long time for a service I enjoy as much as XM radio. I don't understand why the FCC trying to take total control of what we (the people) listen to. I can appreciate (although I don't agree) the FCC trying to "clean up" free broadcast radio, but when it comes to a service WHICH I CHOOSE TO PAY FOR (freedom of choice) that's where I draw the line. The FCC needs to let the market take care of itself. XM was introduced to offer a unique service and continues growing. If the people didn't want it, it would fail on its own. I'm sure the government is pleased with its success, considering more tax dollars for them. The subscribers to this service obviously support it if we didn't I'm sure XM would respond and drop it. Since we CHOOSE to purchase this service, I do not understand why the FCC would even get involved. I will be watching this issue closely and will take it in consideration when I exercise my right to vote...or freedom of choice. Thank you for your time.
